CENTER FOR INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

The Center for International Studies at PVCC provides students with the opportunity to broaden their educational experience to include the countries of the Pacific Rim, both Asia and Latin America, that are affecting life in Arizona.

Both international and intercultural perspectives are integrated into a variety of disciplines. This infusion ensures that students develop the knowledge, skills, attitudes, and values necessary for success in a changing, multicultural world.

Within the Center for International Studies, courses fall under three options:

- 1) International Business Programs
- 2) International Studies Academic Certificates
- 3) International Studies Courses

INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS PROGRAMS

Rapid expansion of international business motivates companies to seek out opportunities originating beyond U.S. borders. As the world economy becomes increasingly integrated, the international businessperson is more important than ever. As part of PVCC's General Business AAS degree, with a specialization area in international business, this curriculum prepares future managers to understand and function in the global economy of the increasingly borderless world. The Certificate of Completion in International Business prepares students for careers in or advancement within international business and related professions.

INTERNATIONAL STUDIES ACADEMIC CERTIFICATES

The Academic Certificates in International Studies, Asia or Latin America, are designed to provide 1) a foundation in general education courses relevant to international studies; 2) a specialization in international education for teaching faculty; 3) a foundation in either Asian or Latin American studies courses for people in gov't agencies or in local business and industries with international interests in Asia or Latin America; and 4) a wide offering of Asian or Latin American studies courses for more meaningful experiences for international travelers.

Please contact an Advisor to assist you in your course selections.

INTERNATIONAL STUDIES COURSES

International Studies courses are designated with an "I" at the left of the section number in the class schedule. The "I" indicates either a specialized International Studies course (as indicated by its title) or a traditional course that has been infused with International Studies content. For example, ARH210: Asian Art and ARH217: Mexican Art History are specialized, more detailed courses focused on particular subjects that are International Studies in nature; whereas ARH101 (Prehistoric thru Gothic Art) and ARH102 (Renaissance thru Contemp. Art) are traditional courses that now contain modules providing students the opportunity to study not only the "Western" tradition, but also traditions associated with India and its sphere of influence in Southeast Asia, and with China and its traditional sphere of influence in Korea and Japan. Courses with International Studies content can be found designated with an "I" in the class schedules under the following headings:
